QUESTION 5

Read the paragraph below.
Determine the text structure.

Before Pluto was reclassified to a dwarf planet, it was the ninth and smallest planet in our solar system. It is so small, that its diameter is only a fifth of the size of Earth's. To put it in perspective, Pluto is so small that it could fit between New York City and Dallas, Texas. Although it is so small, it is big enough to have its own moons like Earth. However, while Earth only has one moon, Pluto has five!

On June 28, 1914, Archduke Ferdinand of Austria was assassinated by 19-year-old Gavrilo Princip from Serbia. This assassination created a domino effect which was ultimately the cause of the first World War. Austria-Hungary declared war against Serbia, which led to both of the countries' allies from joining in and declaring war on each other. Ultimately, the world was at war.

WWI and WWII are the two largest military conflicts in history. Both resulted in millions of deaths, genocides, and lasted approximately the same amount of time. One of the major differences between the two, however, was the cause of the wars. WWI was fought mainly to acquire territory, colonies, and resources, while the main cause of WWII was centered on ideologies, including fascism and communism.

Today, smartphones are basically miniature computers. They can run applications or "Apps," make calls, record appointments, play games, and more. They're fairly small and compact, which makes them very portable. Landline phones, on the other hand, could only make and receive calls. They were connected by a cord to wires that carried conversations back and forth. They were not portable since they had to always be plugged in. Landline phones are becoming less common, while smartphones are seen more and more each day.
